

The Drive

Bernie Roehl, June 2008

“What pretty clouds. I’ll just keep looking at the pretty clouds, and this will all be over soon.”

Jenny had been so excited when her master told her that she would finally get to meet all his friends. They were going to spend the weekend in a small town about an hour away. It was a kink-friendly place, which had a reputation for “looking the other way” when weekend visitors engaged in unusual activities, so it was a common getaway location for her master and his friends.

He had told her that they would be taking his vintage convertible, so he could “drive her around town and show her off to all his friends”. And that was certainly true.

Of course, when he told her this, she had assumed that she would be sitting in the convertible, by her master’s side. She certainly didn’t think she’d be lying on her back on the hood of the car, stark naked, with her wrists tied to the side mirrors and one ankle tied to each end of the front bumper.

So as he drove her around town, he was indeed showing her off to all his friends. It turned out she already knew some of them. One of the first people she saw was her former master, with his new submissive, and they both looked at her and smiled at her plight. Further down the road was that girl from the local munch who she didn’t really get along with, who took this opportunity to laugh and sneer at her. And oh, look... her old high school English teacher. Wonderful.

It was at that point that Jenny decided not to even look at who was on the streets of the town, and instead she stared up at the sky. “What pretty clouds. I’ll just keep looking at the pretty clouds, and this will all be over soon.”

Of course, “soon” is relative. It felt like ages. Finally, her master pulled into a parking lot next to the beach, where his friends were gathered. No sooner had she thought “oh good, it’s done,” when her master began to undo his belt and climb on top of her. As she looked around, she saw his many friends and their partners sitting on lawn chairs and benches, having a few beers and getting ready to enjoy the show.